

Misbah Mahmood

I am a digital midwife leading and implementing digital change across Leeds Teaching Hospitals and my Local Maternity System (LMS), aiming to provide safe quality care to women and their families.

I have been a qualified midwife for 7 and digital midwife for 4 years ago.

I have successfully implemented a full end to end electronic patient maternity record and enhanced interoperability by interfacing the maternity record with the trust electronic patient record. In September 2020 I worked on implementing an online notes portal for women to access their notes using a secure web portal.

My goals are to engage vulnerable groups more with using digital technology and to improve data quality.

In addition, I am an active member of the Digital Midwives Expert Reference Group. This year I was appointed as chair of the LMS digital midwives subgroup.

I am honoured to also be a 2021 Florence Nightingale digital scholar. During the course of my scholarship I have had the opportunity to network with some truly inspirational colleagues.

I have attended the CHIME leadership course as well as REWIRED and had the opportunity to link in with Natasha Phillips and other industry leaders.
