Summary

This resource reflects upon the latest series of integrated care system (ICS) council meetings which took place mid-January 2023. Since the last update in Autumn, all councils are in operation and making strides in raising awareness of the councils amongst the student body and stakeholders. Though each council are at different stages of development, all council members are dedicated to influencing the improvement of the student experience and strengthening student voice.

A wellbeing check-in (Appendix A) in the form of a clarity exercise at the beginning of every meeting has recently been introduced. Below are the data focal points of what was and was not working for each council member at the time in the context of themselves, their roles, and their working environments.

#TeamFNF #FNFStudents

Through participating in this exercise, council members were able to speak freely in a courageous space and hear from their peers either discovering that they are not alone or what coping strategies work best for others. Each council member will receive this resource and have been reassured that they can use it at any time, relying on their council colleagues and FNF for assistance when required.

In each meeting, all members went around the virtual space sharing individual updates. Generally, this time is used to celebrate personal achievements or air any difficulties, share student voice through discussing student networks and experiences at a local level, and feeding back engagement with stakeholders. All councils have been briefed on a new progress update template which they must complete a week prior to attending any future meetings (Appendix B).

Collaborating on individual council objectives, each council receive protected time to set short and long terms goals. Below are the themes which emerged during this series of meetings.

Though it is up to each council what they choose to implement when aiming to positively influence student experiences, these themes are not singular and impact a few, sometimes all ICSs across the region. When meeting at a regional level, the agenda is based on these commonalities and provides a space where all councils can delve deeper into topics, learn, share, and collaborate.

Stakeholders joined the second half of the Student Council Meetings. They were first asked to deliver any student facing updates which required comment or the future involvement of council members. This consisted of the student hardship survey progress, the invitation to facilitating a focus group training to assist, placement expansion projects, ideas on raising concerns or give feedback, and several calls for student involvement at system level to gain student voice. Council members were then able to comment or enquire during a question-and-answer session.

All meeting discussions were recorded, and actions have been logged (Appendix C). The innovation and dedication to this programme is exciting and the Research and Policy Team at FNF have reassured each council of the support which can be offered. All members will be expected to report on progress between January ICS student council meetings and the next regional meeting which is taking place on Thursday 9 March 2023 in-person at 10 Union Street, London.

Background

Established in April 2021 and funded by Health Education England South East (HEE SE), FNF established six (one per each ICS) multi-professional student shared decision-making councils (SPDMCs) across the SE region of England.

The membership of the councils includes student nurses, midwives, allied health professionals (AHPs), and trainee nursing associates (TNAs). This programme is upscaling the successful model of the Hampshire and Isle of Wight (HIOW) Student Nurse Council which was piloted with support from Sue Hill (former Senior Nurse at HEE SE), Jackie Munro (Chief Nurse at Solent NHS Trust) and Jessica Sainsbury (Student Nurse at the time of establishment).

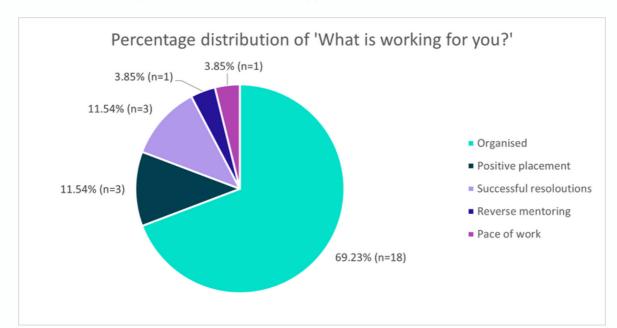

The Programme aims to amplify student voice at system level, filling the gap between the student body, Universities and Practice Providers with a strong, strategic, consistent student influence. The SPDMC have set a regional mission and vision for the programme and are finalising their distinct and separate ICS objectives in line with their student populations.

Themes of Discussion

Student Welfare

Wellbeing Check-in

During the wellbeing check-in where council members answered what was and was not working for them in the context of themselves, their role or work environment, all 33 council members identified the bellow themes. You can see the number of times respondents stated it in brackets and examples or direct quotes are used where applicable.

Organised (n=18)

- Routine self-care (n=8)
- Work/planning is up to date (n=5)
- Organiser/calendar or journal (n=3)
- Whiteboard (n=1)
- Work environment (n=1)

```
Placement (n=3)
Successful resolutions (n=3)
Reverse mentoring (n=1)
Pace of work (n=1)
```

Time for self-care (n=17)

- Sleep (n=5)
- Stress (n=3)
- Diet (n=2)
- Family time (n=2)
- Gym (n=1)

Minimal time spent outdoors (n=5) Pace of work (n=3) No productivity (n=3) Feeling isolated on placement (n=1)

It is important to note that all council members have been invited to use or disseminate this resource whenever they feel it beneficial. Support is available for council members to address items which fall under the 'what is not working' section in meetings or in a 1:1 setting.

Student Wellbeing

The mental health and wellbeing of students is discussed frequently. Students are consistently calling to raise the profile and accessibility of resources that are available to students. Alongside this, council members are calling for the importance of student access to existing resources for substantive staff in organisations to be discussed with key stakeholders. Often students encounter traumatic experiences whilst attending placement and are 'usually expected to be fine with no facility to reflect or offload'. Furthermore, students sometimes do not feel able to request support or access to resources as extended members of the team, as they are often reminded that they are 'just a student'.

Student wellbeing has been tabled for discussion at the March regional student council meeting.

Cost-of-Living Crisis

Council members shared that the cost-of-living crisis is having a significant impact on students across the region and therefore all ICS councils are seeking to positively influence or change financial pressures whilst studying. An example which has been raised previously is that some students are choosing whether to purchase food or fuel to travel to placement. An additional related area that council members would like to explore with stakeholders is the financial pressures particularly on international students as they have limited access to funding and support. In the January series of meetings council members reviewed parking prices, the use and need for discounted food/foodbanks, and free sanitary products.

Communication

Placement Orientation Resources

Creating a sense of belonging and appropriate orientation to new placement areas across the region was discussed at length. Each council have local innovations and suggestions for improvement which they have been encouraged to explore with stakeholders. Through consultation with their networks, students feel that limited information is given prior to starting placement and in worst cases students are finding out their placement allocation with 24-hours' notice. This leaves little to no time for individuals to prepare, organise their home lives, and often causes anxiety. Furthermore, students can often receive outdated information i.e., contact details, resources. Students have also reflected that 'initial interviews' do not always allow them the opportunity to share details of their personal circumstances and any reasonable adjustments. This can lead to students not performing as well on placement as they believe they are capable of.

All 6 councils aim to influence existing workstreams in their ICSs regarding placement orientation and where this does not exist, to work with stakeholders to introduce them. Council members in 2 councils wish to create a webpage to act as a single-point-of-truth for all practice placements which is updated by Learning Environment Leads for the area. Other ideas include the ability to leave reviews, buddying systems, and reasonable adjustment passports.

Student Councils will be actively reaching out to those leading this work, however stakeholders are welcome to get in touch directly.

Giving Feedback

Students are apathetic when asked to give feedback on placement experiences as they do not feel that current feedback mechanisms lead to positive change. This proves to be problematic as not only could positive feedback boost workforce morale, constructive feedback should be acted on to improve the environment for all including permanent staff, students, and patients. FNF encourage council members to shine a light on good practice through authoring case studies. All councils wish to investigate the process of giving feedback and closing the feedback loop, so the wider student body is aware of 'what happened next'.

All student council members are engaged with the South East RePAIR Fellows and have contributed to their initiatives including the student hardship survey in which the data and 'you said, we did' actions will be shared with them directly.

Engagement

Social Media

All councils have been encouraged to create professional social media accounts both as individual council members and as ICS Student Councils. They have received an optional 'professional use of social media' training session and understand the advantages of creating media content to engage with others and have developed communication strategies. You can find the ICS Student Council social media handles later in this document, please do connect with them.

Surveys

Many of the student councils are utilising surveys to capture the views and experiences of the student populations that they represent. This will allow council members to make informed choices and share the data strategically to enable stakeholders to make evidence-based decisions when implementing change that may affect students.

Stakeholder Intervention

For the latter half of all ICS student council meetings, stakeholders from the system are invited to join the meeting. Student council members and the FNF team would like to thank all stakeholders for engaging in this way and for your continued support.

If you are a stakeholder wanting to hear and raise student voice and would like to attend future meetings please email policy@florence-nightingale-foundation.org.uk and the team can send you the relevant calendar invitation(s).
