

Rachel Bird

Rachel Bird works at Sheffield Teaching Hospital NHS Foundation Trust, where she is a Deputy Nurse Director for Operating Services, Critical Care & Anaesthesia (OSCCA) care group.

Rachel trained at Sheffield University and specialised in Emergency Care, during her career she progressed to a Senior Sister & Emergency Nurse Practitioner before moving out of Emergency Care into a key clinical leadership position where she provided operational and strategic leadership ensuring the delivery of high quality patient care across an acute Trust.

In 2020 Rachel was successful in completing the FNF emerging leaders scholarship, the main highlights for her scholarship was attending Royal Academy of Drama and Arts (RADA) and completing a leadership course at Harvard University.

Rachel is keen to champion the benefits and invaluable experience of being an FNF scholar to ensure that nurses have a voice and place at the table. She is happy to share her learning from being a FNF scholar and the impact it had on her both professional and personally.
